THE CALLAN PARK ASYLUM.

LAW REPORT.

The Government are now advertising for tenders for the erection of the new lunatic asylum at Callan Park, a work of considerable magnitude; and some account of the nature and progress of the project will be given by the plaintiff in the accompanying report. The Callan Park estate includes an area of a little more than one hundred acres, and with the large house upon it, was bought a few years ago for the very reasonable amount of £11,000. The site of the hospital is about three and a half miles from Sydney, and is approached from the Parramatta and Balmain roads, to which latter it is a considerable distance, as to the Callan Park estate, which is a very fine one, and is situated on the banks of the Parramatta River, which is dotted with Spectacles, Cockatoo, and other islands, and of the reaches of water which run up between the indentations of the northern shore of the river. Hunter's Hill and other suburbs give variety to a very charming landscape, in which forest and water views are so happily combined, and the western horizon is bounded by the Blue Mountains. The plans of the buildings have been designed by Mr. James Barlett, the Colonial Architect, who has had the advantage of conference with Dr. E. N. Hunter on the subject. Simplicity and fitness for the object intended, is the chief feature which marks the elevations.

The main design of the building is adopted from that for the new Asylum for the county of Kent, at Chatham, of which Messrs. Giles and Gough are the architects. Considerable alterations have, however, been made in the arrangement, and a large verandah space has been added to meet the requirements of the climate of New South Wales.

The accommodation for patients is in two divisions—one for males and one for females—separated by the central and administrative offices. An equal number of each sex are provided for, and the arrangements for each are similar in all essential points.

Each division consists of three distinct parts:—
1st. A large block placed near the administrative offices, and the different quarters, for the reception of patients, one for the sick and the other for the recent and acute cases, both of which classes require special attention and supervision.
2nd. Three pavilions or wards connected with the rest of the hospital by verandahs or corridors for the violent and noisy, the convalescent and working patients, and patients in the intermediate class.
3rd. Three detached cottages, each to contain sixteen patients, for the quiet and convalescent, and for patients who have been in a better position in life.

In addition to the pavilions and cottages, there are in the range of buildings, and in the cottages for gardeners, &c., by which means six convalescent male patients will be comfortably accommodated.

The total accommodation may be set down as under:—
In main block, and three pavilions, divided as follows:—
In ward for sick 62
Ditto for acute cases 65
Intermediate ward 65
Ward for quiet and convalescent 65
Ditto for quiet and convalescent 65
Total 307
In detached cottages 48
In gate lodges 6
Total 361

The buildings are two-storied throughout except at the end of the pavilions, where they rise to three stories. The accommodation consists of day rooms and dormitories, and the whole of the day or living rooms are on the ground-floor.

The first and the small second floor is devoted entirely to the accommodation of patients. The very large dormitories, which are 102, of these 140 are ordinary single rooms, and 12 are partitioned, and 8 added for acute cases, and others requiring special treatment. The dormitories are 102, of these 140 are ordinary single rooms, and 12 are partitioned, and 8 added for acute cases, and others requiring special treatment. The dormitories are 102, of these 140 are ordinary single rooms, and 12 are partitioned, and 8 added for acute cases, and others requiring special treatment.

The proportion of single rooms, however, a proportion of about one-third of the total accommodation. This is somewhat larger than has been fixed as necessary in some modern asylums, but special circumstances have determined the adoption of this proportion. The hospital is a metropolitan one, and the proportion of admissions to the whole residential population, and the number of acute cases requiring separate sleeping rooms, is, therefore, likely to be large. In the direction of the building, the English Commissioners in Lunacy it is stated 'that the proportion of single rooms need not exceed one-fourth,' and the Commissioners have taken notice of this in some cases where the proportion provided has not been more than one-fifth.

The associated dormitories, including the rooms at the gate lodges, will accommodate 304 patients. The very large dormitories, which are 102, of these 140 are ordinary single rooms, and 12 are partitioned, and 8 added for acute cases, and others requiring special treatment. SUPREME COURT.—MONDAY, AUGUST 26.

THIRD TERM.

In Bates.—(Before His Honor Mr. Justice HARRISON.)
Mr. Justice FAIRCUTT, and Mr. WILLIAM MANNING.
OWTON v. THE BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES.
On the motion of Mr. Bates on behalf of the defendants, instructed by Messrs. Allen, Bowden, and Allen, the Court made an order of the Full Bench, made on appeal, a rule of Court with costs.

PETERSEN v. COX AND ANOTHER.
This was an interpleader issue to decide the ownership of certain furniture, &c., conveyed by the plaintiff to the absolute bill of sale and issued to the giver of the bill of sale, tried before His Honor Mr. Justice Manning and a jury on the 25th of July last. The verdict was in favor of the plaintiff, the verdict was entered for the defendants on the ground that there was a verbal defence between the parties which should have been written on the bill of sale before the time when by law it had to be registered. The execution was within the 30 days allowed for registration, and though the bill of sale had been registered the defect might have been cured before the expiration of the 30 days.

The Court granted a rule.
After attending for the conduct of the business, the Court ordered new trial motions to be set down for to-morrow (Tuesday) to be then called on separately.

EXTENDED SITTINGS FOR CAUSES.
Jury Court.—(Before His Honor Mr. Justice WINDHAM.)
DAYTON AND ANOTHER v. HUNTERFORD.
This trial was resumed, and was part heard.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—MONDAY.

intermediate education is concerned, it is ment for secular instruction to all schools able of attaining the required standard results. It does not call into exist-directly any new schools, it does endow any schools, but it offers stimulus to aid to produce the results required. Religious and will gain this assistance not because are Denominational, but although they are Denominational. And this system is best, not because in itself it is considered best, but because of its adaptation to the social circumstances of the Irish people.
peasantry are among the poorest in the world, and they have few of those great middle-schools such as abound in England, and are liberally endowed by Royal and public liberality. The Lord Chancellor told the House of Lords that between 1801 and 1871 the number of schools in Ireland had decreased 739 to 554.

er, when the Irish population was five and a half millions, only 10,814 boys were to be found in any educational establishment learning Latin, Greek, any modern language, or mathematics, or about two to the thousand against fifteen to the thousand in England. I don't add that while in Scotland 371 of every 100,000 inhabitants were being educated in endowed intermediate schools, in Ireland there were 199 Protestants and only two Roman Catholics per 100,000 of the respective populations of those kingdoms. For several centuries the ecclesiastical property of Ireland was monopolized by an alien hierarchy, whose ministrations were entirely unconnected with the

to remedy that grievance by passing Mr. GLADSTONE'S Irish Church Act in 1869 was one of the greatest achievements of the present century. It was the first step towards the ruin of out of those ecclesiastical estates, not from general taxes, that this to intermediate education is to be added the Irish people, and the distinction of sect or creed. In this instance these funds were appropriated to charitable purposes; but they appear to be large for that, as there is now a surplus nearly four millions sterling, and the are not likely to suffer by the reapportionment of a million as a stimulus to middle-class education. All these modern conditions must be fully considered by us who would estimate fairly the new Irish Act. Because such a measure is deemed suitable for Ireland, it does not follow that it is suitable to other countries. Still less does it follow that because it has been applied in intermediate schools, therefore it ought to be the basis of all primary education. Least of all does it follow that the principle of religious ascendancy, which is being gradually wiped out of the political institutions of the United Kingdom, and is dying hard, but still dying, on the Continent of Europe, could be revived in the educational institutions of Australia—a land which has never

We have already touched upon one of the main lines of the Pastoral which we published in the last issue, namely, that England over the past century has become a Catholic atmosphere. The Pastoral claims that it is owing to the same cause that permits freedom of education. England, this Pastoral teaches, though for centuries Protestant, has been saturated with Catholic influence; and as the results of that influence is liberty of thought and of expression, so the result is liberty to teach and to receive State endowment for teaching. It is unfortunate that the Pastoral is based on the basis of a Protestant and not on those of a Catholic country. If the results of Catholicism were in the direction of liberty of teaching, for which Dr. VAUGHAN in no strong a claim, that liberty would surely have been granted in those countries where Catholicism has for centuries held undisputed sway; but we know that no such liberty has been granted in any of those countries, and that such liberty has been tolerated by Catholic dignitaries. On the contrary, the freedom of teaching which Dr. HURAN so much admires in England, is, when it reaches non-Catholics, just the kind of freedom that which the highest authorities of Catholicism have always vehemently protested. Whatever Catholicism may have done for England, the Roman Catholic hierarchy, and the Pope, did not furnish the materials out of which the fabric of civil and religious liberty has been reared. There may be much to excite admiration in countries like Italy and Spain, but no one could claim that they are the nurseries of freedom.

surely no secret that until VICTOR KRAMER left Rome, non-Catholic teaching was kept outside. The exact content of the curriculum was not as bad as it seems, but it was not so religious as to include, for example, the teaching, to Christians as well as to infidels, for a Church to claim the credit in principle, against which she has stamped her mark. The curriculum was not so liberal as to include, when she has had power to do so, is a somewhat remarkable thing, but this is what the American Catholic Church is doing in the person of VAUGHAN. How can Catholicism be credited with a liberalism which it condemns? One can only wonder whether this is not postpry! Freedom of teaching for all sects and classes may be a good thing, but it is not one of the things of which Catholicism can make its boast. On the other day M. CASSEGNAC, the great Bonapartist and Catholic champion, urged his claim for the liberty of writing on a much more solid ground. He said that the right of free expression was a the Spectator of ADDISON's days contains a passage somewhere, in which the possibility of Minette's aggressions, such as might at some distant menace the security of Great Britain. The Russian position, as speculated upon rather than as a matter of policy, is not so much a question of aggression as of hostility than one of serious consideration. It is far from proved that within a much shorter period of time than has elapsed since Xuan's reign, the Russian position will be such as to justify the intervention which is now, like Muscovite aggression in the Balkans, a subject of curious speculation, may become a burning question of the hour in our foreign policy. We mean Chinese aggression. The Russian re-conquest of Turkestan, by China, has awakened the world to the recognition of the fact that the vitality of the Celestial Empire is far from being extinct. In the opinion of a high authority, Colonel Gornov, China possesses all the raw material of a great military power. She has an inexhaustible supply of men, brave, intelligent, and amenable to discipline. She depends on a steady Customs revenue, and she has the means to put without dimcuty, bar-rimental force, equipped with all modern appliances, in the field. The current opinion of her government averse to the use of such appliances

is refuted by the fact that, for some years past,
has been steadily organizing a great navy,
not on the European model. "Millions," we are told, "have been spent in the construction and purchase of war steamers of the newest type, and
